Pilot ejects safely from F-15

By Capt. Peter A. Kerr and Staff Sgt. Jim Bianchi
48th Fighter Wing and AWFC Public Affairs

An F-15C crashed Aug. 3 at 10:45 a.m. near Rachel, Nev. The pilot, Capt. Christopher Kirby, 493rd Fighter Squadron, RAF Lakenheath, England, safely ejected from the aircraft. As a precaution, he was transported to the Mike O'Callaghan Federal Hospital where he was evaluated and released.

"Captain Kirby is in excellent condition," said Brig. Gen. David Moody, 57th Wing commander. "He was a little shook up from ejecting from an aircraft, but that's expected."

Once on the ground, Captain Kirby was picked up by UH-60 helicopter flown by B-Company, 1st Battalion, 108th Aviation Oklahoma Army National Guard, just nine minutes after he touched down. The helicopter was flying a mission near by as part of the ongoing Green Flag exercise.

"The helicopter landed near by and he (Captain Kirby) just walked over and climbed in," said General Moody.

"One of the most wonderful sights I've seen in a long time was Captain Kirby stepping off the helicopter on his own power, and to see his squadron mates greet him back as a brother," said Col. Jack Egginton, Green Flag deployed forces commander. "The most important thing is that 'Joust' (Kirby) is well. We've climbed back into the saddle and continue to train with the same emphasis on safety and smart tactical employment."

"It was great seeing my squadron mates waiting for me," said Captain Kirby. "The ejection seat worked as advertised. The only injury I sustained was being stuck with the IV in the hospital."

This is the first F-15C ever lost by the 493rd FS. Since 1994, when the squadron first acquired the Eagle, they have flown thousands of hours without the loss of a single aircraft. This outstanding flying record is a testament to the professionalism, dedication and hard work done by the men and women who support and fly these aircraft, said General Moody.

In addition, aircraft from Nellis flew 36,000 hours in the past year incident-free. This volume of take-offs and landings make Nellis the ninth busiest airport in the United States. Coupled with the sheer variety of aircraft, everything from the Vietnam-era F-4 Phantom and MiG-17 Stoli that flew here during the recent air show, to the ultra-modern C-17 Globemaster and B-2 Stealth Bomber. These along with the dozens of international partner aircraft come here to fly on the range complex, make Nellis a busy, but safe place to fly.

"We fly demanding missions and the American public has come to expect great victories such as the Gulf War, but there is always some risk," said General Moody.

The aircraft accident site, located 170 miles north of Nellis, will take up to a month to clean up. Working with the Bureau of Land Management, the aircraft recovery crews will ensure the area is returned to its natural state, said General Moody.

An accident investigation board has formed to investigate the cause of the crash.

Police beat: Help keep Nellis crime free

By Staff Sgt. Paul Beuchat
99th Security Forces

The following is a summary of incidents occurring in Nellis' community from May 1 through July 10. Crime affects everyone, directly or indirectly, and thus affects the ability of Air Force personnel to perform the mission. The community is encouraged to become actively involved by watching out for any suspicious activities and reporting them to 99th Security Forces' Crime Stop line at 652-5100.

Traffic citations/DUIs

Nellis security forces unit issued 306 traffic citations. Thirteen driving under the influence incidents were detected and/or reported.

In 2000, Nellis has had 16 military members apprehended for DUI. The base experienced its first on-base accident as a result of alcohol for the year in July. We can't say it enough—Don't drink and drive.

Help and assistance is only a phone call away from either a friend, family member, unit's designated driver program or others like the civilian non-profit ARRIVE ALIVE, 873-8553. There is no safe way to drive after drinking.

Theft of property:

Thirty-two thefts were reported. Sixty eight percent of the thefts were due to unsecured property. Securing property isn't a guarantee against theft, but it does make it harder for the thief. A recent trend has also surfaced—a rash of unsecured bicycle thefts and burglaries in the Manch Manor housing area. Don't let living on base lead into a false sense of security. Crime still occurs. Please lock or secure valuables.

Shoplifting:

Fourteen incidents of shoplifting totaling $167 were reported. Shoplifting numbers are on the rise.

Items shoplifted are usually of little value, and easily placed in a pocket or purse. The person drifts out the door seemingly home free. Until an exchange store detective approaches him. The "item of little value" now becomes a criminal expense. We live in a town that makes money on the odds and trust us, the odds are against people who think they can beat the BX security system.

Security forces crime tip of the week:

Participation is the key to preventing vandalism, burglary and theft. One of the most effective ways to deter crime is to set up a Neighborhood Watch. What is a Neighborhood Watch and how does it work? A Neighborhood Watch is a program where residents of Nellis family housing areas and security forces people cooperate in preventing and stopping crime before it occurs. The goal of the program is to increase awareness of crime in base residential areas and to encourage cooperation among neighbors in observing and reporting suspicious activities. Nellis has one neighborhood participating in the program. Help deter crime on base by becoming active in a Neighborhood Watch program. Contact a security forces crime prevention representative at 652-3326 for details on starting a Neighborhood Watch.

In the meantime, here's a quick tip to protect homes while away.

*Notify neighbors when going away from home for an extended period of time.

*Leave a key with a responsible party and inform security forces.

*Finally, contact the security forces desk at 652-2311 and inform them about planned trips and arrange to have quarters checked during that period of absence.

Remember to report crimes or suspicious actions to 99th Security Forces' Crime Stop number, 652-5100.

AFCs speaks out on retirees' health care problems

File photo

By Gen. Michael E. Ryan
Air Force Chief of Staff

One of the biggest quality of life issues facing the Air Force today is health care.

For the retired members of our Air Force family, it is their number one concern — particularly having access to medical care after turning age 65. Our retirees stood for America and fought the fight. We must find solutions to their health care needs because it is the right thing to do.

As committed as we are to addressing this issue of retiree benefits, we must also uphold our commitment to the American people to be fiscally responsible. Our goal is to provide a meaningful medical benefit, to include pharmacy coverage. Our challenge is to provide this without bankrupting the system. This is no small task.

There are many demonstration projects looking at alternative solutions. While these are promising, we must carefully evaluate the demonstrations before committing to their full implementation.

For example, the TRICARE Senior Prime demonstration is proving popular with our retirees. However, we have significant issues with funding and benefit design that needs to be addressed before this can be a permanent solution.

I am gratified to see that Congress shares our concern for providing health care benefits to our senior retirees. Numerous bills have been introduced this legislative session addressing this issue. Some bills call for a wide range of benefits without an identified plan for funding, while others call for a more modest benefit initially, accompanied by commitments for appropriate funding.

A benefit without funding does not bring health care to our retirees. We must have congressional funding support. The Air Force is not idly sitting by, but is aggressively pursuing solutions. Our Surgeon General, Lt. Gen. Paul K. Carlton, Jr., is pushing forward with creative options involving all parties who play a role in providing health care for seniors: the DoD, the Health Care Financing Agency, and contracted health plans.

The Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, Gen. John Handy, also is pushing hard for solutions through the Defense Medical Oversight Committee, the tri-service oversight body for medical benefits and funding.

There is still work to be done to reach our goals. Air Force senior leaders are taking the lead to work with our retirees, the other military services, Health Affairs and Congress to ensure appropriate health care benefits for all our members, including our senior retirees.

F-16 pilot ejects safely

One Air Force pilot ejected safely from his aircraft and a second returned to Nellis safely following a midair collision between two F-16s at approximately 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Maj. David Kossler was participating in a four-ship squadron training mission on Nellis Air Force Range when the accident occurred. He ejected safely from his aircraft approximately 50 miles northeast of base, sustaining only minor injuries. Maj. Kossler was recovered by the 66th Rescue Squadron and flown to the base where he was evaluated at the Mike O'Callaghan Federal Hospital and released.

Maj. Brandon Sweat flew the second F-16 which sustained minor damage. Both pilots and aircraft involved are assigned to the 422nd Test and Evaluation Squadron that is part of the 53rd Wing at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. The unit operates from Nellis.

"Anytime we have an accident, we are extremely concerned," said Brig. Gen. David Moody, 57th Wing commander. "We take our safety record very seriously and do everything we can to mitigate the risks involved in flying our high performance aircraft. I am confident the safety board will determine what occurred in this accident and, if there are procedures we need to change to eliminate that risk, they will be done immediately."

Why isn't the Bullseye on time?

Why is the Bullseye not delivered to facilities before 8 a.m. Friday mornings? It doesn't arrive at the Commissary until after 9 a.m. and some weeks even later. Is there a way deliveries can be made before 8 a.m.?

The Bullseye is published by a private firm, Aerotech News and Review, they are required to distribute the newspaper to various locations on base no later than 10 a.m. The Bullseye is published in Lancaster, Calif., and driven to Nellis for distribution.

The newspapers arrive on base at approximately 5 a.m. on the day of publication. After separating and individually wrapping papers for distribution in base housing, delivery of the Bullseye begins no later than 7 a.m. starting first with base housing units, both Manch Manner and Nellis Terrace.

Many on base facilities receive deliveries. This could take up to six hours to complete from the time publications arrive at Nellis.

The Bullseye is also available on Nellis' Web site, at www.nellis.af.mil/pa/bullseyepdf.htm, usually by Thursday afternoons. For more information, call 652-2750.

Airman borrows ATM card gets bad-conduct discharge

By Capt. Russell G. Leavitt
Staff Judge Advocate Office

Before a general court-martial convened July 12, Airman 1st. Class Joshua Wilson pled guilty to stealing more than $3,000 from a fellow airman. Airman Wilson had borrowed the airman's ATM card, saying that he wanted to borrow $100. Over the next several days, Airman Wilson withdrew all of the money in the account and lost most of it gambling. He also spent some of his acquaintance's money buying breakfast for a number of their mutual friends.

A military judge sentenced Airman Wilson to a bad-conduct discharge, reduction to the grade of E-1, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and 12 months confinement. In adjudging this sentence, the court also considered Airman Wilson's previous record, which included four letters of reprimand and an Article 15. Airman Wilson was taken directly from court to the confinement facility.

It's a great Air Force

By Chief Master Sgt.
Toney Beatty
AWFC Command Chief

During my travels around base, I am constantly reminded of what a great Air Force we have. Our Air Force consists of diverse people who bring different talents and capabilities to the mission.

The United States is respected around the world in times of peace and war because of what we do on a daily basis. When our nation takes the lead in a crisis, the U.S. Air Force is engaged. Our people are the instrument of choice when it comes to providing humanitarian relief or putting precision-guided munitions on a target from half a world away.

Nellis plays an important role in this mission. We are respected around the globe by our peers at other bases as well as our neighbors in the local community. Everyone goes above and beyond ensuring we provide the Air Force with the best-trained fighter pilots in the world.

Members of Team Nellis are community-minded folks, heavily involved in community activities ranging from Corporate Challenge to Opportunity Village and Christmas in April.

Our base is unlike any other due to its vast operations and continuous activities. No other base is charged with the responsibility of carrying out its day-to-day mission while successfully supporting continuous dignitary visits, flag exercises and demonstrations of power and training.

This is possible because of you—the members of Team Nellis, the professionals who give yourselves unselfishly and proudly day in and day out in the service of our great nation.

I encourage each of you to continue to look ahead to the future. Know what's going on within your organization and the Air Force. Accept your role and share those special talents that will help us continue to be the world's greatest Air Force.

66th RQS airman deploys, reunites with dad

By Maj. Andy Roake
Operation Northern Watch Public Affairs

While deployed to Incirlik Air Base, Turkey, supporting Operation Northern Watch, Senior Airman Ryan Renuart, 66th Rescue Squadron, feels more than a professional connection with the people of Operation Southern Watch; he actually has a kinship with one of them.

The commander of the southern forces is his dad, Maj. Gen. Victor Renuart, Operation Southern Watch, Joint Task Force-Southwest Asia commander and 9th Air and Space Expeditionary Task Force-Southwest Asia commander.

While deployed the Renuart's flew together for the first time professionally, during a recent visit by Gen. Renuart to Incirlik as part of a series of multilevel meetings to improve interaction between Operation Northern Watch and Operation Southern Watch. The two flew in an HH-60 helicopter with the elder Renuart piloting the aircraft and the younger Renuart as the gunner.

"It's great to see him," said Airman Renuart, who has been in the Air Force just over four years.

The only other time their professional paths crossed was when Airman Renuart was TDY to Bahrain several years ago as an F-15 weapons loader. Gen. Renuart deployed with a squadron of F-16s as the first USAFE unit to support Operation Southern Watch.

"While there, I got the opportunity to visit with him and see his unit," said Gen. Renuart. "We've tried to fly together before, but couldn't — mainly because of my schedule. This was the first time we've flown in an aircraft together since he was about three years old and we were flying in a Cessna 172. That's pretty special, to have him do his job and have me do my job (of flying the aircraft) and both of us come together at the same time and place.

"I suspect he was a little nervous, not about how he was going to do, but that his fighter-pilot dad would do as well as he would like. But it worked out fine. It was a good flight."

Airman Renuart was influenced somewhat by his dad in joining the Air Force. He was in college for three years when he reached a decision point.

"It got to the point where I didn't know exactly what I wanted to do, so I figured it was probably time to leave and quit wasting my Dad's money - so I joined the Air Force.

"I originally was going to join the Army, I had a guaranteed job flying on helicopters. I got to talking with (his dad) about what he thought and ultimately decided it was in my best interest to join the Air Force," Airman Renuart said.

When asked if it was a good decision, Airman Renuart replied, "Yeah, I think so. I've had a lot of fun in the Air Force. I'm pretty pleased with what I've done while I've been in the military."

General Renuart said, "It was an opportunity to grow and mature on his own and establish his goals in his own right. It's been a good move for him and I couldn't be more proud to have him as a participant in Operation Northern Watch — to be here on active duty in the Air Force doing something that he thinks is important and enjoys. That's been pretty special. Clearly I have the dad's concern to keep him safe and keep him secure, but I am also confident that the training the Air Force provides will do that.

"He has taken on a difficult task and decided to do it well and done it professionally. That makes his mom and me very proud of him."

Lakenheath visits Green Flag

By Capt. Peter A. Kerr
48th FW Public Affairs

"The Home of the Fighter Pilot" became the temporary home to 340 48th Fighter Wing RAF Lakenheath, as 24 F-15E and F-15C aircraft and more than 110 tons of cargo deployed here for Green Flag through Sept. 10.

"The purpose of Green Flag is to train the next generation of flyers for the next conflict," said Maj. Thomas Colby, Green Flag project officer. "Studies show that if you survive your first 10 combat sorties, your chances of surviving the war go up dramatically. We're giving the new guys their 10 sorties—that's what Green Flag is all about."

Green Flag lasts three two-week periods, and typically two large-scale air battles are fought each day, said Tech. Sgt. Ethan Jones, 48th FW plans and programs operations. "Traditionally Green Flag emphasizes the United States' electronic warfare capability in large aerial combat exercises. This Green Flag is a bit different, as it will be the last one."

"Green Flag will be incorporated into Red Flag," said Master Sgt. Benjamin Thomas, superintendent of logistics for Nellis Support Center. "This year we have included some of our allied nations. In the future, we will have four Red Flags and one Maple Flag a year."

"This year we have 2,245 people and 119 aircraft from six countries—plus forces from each of the other services and the National Guard," said Col. Jack B. Egginton, deployed forces commander. "The guys are fired up. This training is second to none—no other place can provide this realistic training. Here the emphasis is on coalition composite warfare. We bring countries and varying capabilities and elements of combat power together, melding them to solve tactical problems and accomplish the mission. It is a very rewarding experience."

Working in the sweltering 120-degree heat, RAF Lakenheath ground crews ensured all aircraft were fully prepared for familiarization rides. "We're all ready to go," said Senior Master Sgt. Ken Connor, 492nd FS. "Both the 492nd and 494th are pulling together on the maintenance side, and so far we've had no integration problems. By working as one team, we are able to have less swapping out of personnel, and it is good training for the 494th to be here."

As a lead Air Expeditionary Force Wing, the 48th FW has supplied the command and control element, called the "Green Flag Core," for the exercise. "We try to separate Green Flag from the rest of the base; to handle all our issues internally before we seek assistance," said Chief Master Sgt. Dennis More, core maintenance chief. "The Green Flag Core consists of about 35 personnel, including the Maintenance Operations Center, and are responsible for directing both the U.S. operations as well as the Italian, German, Singapore, Canadian and British."

"Training with our allies guys, as they get to see some of the new systems on the 492nd aircraft. At Lakenheath, we are used to working as one team."

"We are working as a 'purple' squadron, but we (the two squadrons) blend well," said Senior Airman Jarrell Bryant, 492nd FS. "The mission is important—but the biggest difference for us is the weather. I'd rather be hot than cold. I love it in England, but it is also great just makes sense, because that is the way we fight," said Chief More. "All the jets are looking ready, and are in good condition for coming such a long way. We are already learning lessons about how other countries differ from us in maintenance issues. While the basics seem to be the same, the differences in specialty areas allow us to learn from them, and them to learn from us."

Singapore visits Nellis

By Ms. Monique Staskiewicz
AWFC Public Affairs

From the small country in the South Island Sea, representatives from the Republic of Singapore Air Force are here to participate in the last Green Flag.

"Singapore is an island country that is pretty small, about 25 miles wide and 20 miles in width, with about 4 million people," said Lt. Col. Kah Han Tan, 428th Fighter Wing, which operates out of Cannon Air Force Base, N.M. "We try as much as possible within our small country to reciprocate to the United States as much as they give to us.

"Our relationship with the United States is very cordial. There is an intergovernmental agreement between the United States and Singapore and we have a strategic alliance with the U.S."

Representatives of Singapore's Observer Team are also on base to monitor the skills of their troops participating in Green Flag.

"This is a routine exercise to monitor our troops," said Col. Chee Khern Ng, commander, Tengah Air Base, Singapore. "The F-16s come under my command and control. I only get to see them twice a year to give feedback on their performance and provide administrative or logistics help."

Three of the four Singapore units stationed within the continental United States are at Green Flag. Singapore units are stationed in Arizona, Texas, New Mexico, and Kansas.

"This is the first time we have three of our units flying on Nellis," said Col. Tan. "We are honored to be here and very appreciative that the U. S. government allowed us to be a part of it. Each unit has different training programs, so this is a great opportunity for us to come and participate with the other countries in Green Flag.

"We have about 90 percent of our units here. We've brought in 25 of the 119 aircraft participating in this exercise, so we are about 20 percent of the total force."

Green Flag continues through Sept. 9. Non-U.S. units depart tomorrow.

"We feel very welcome and if we are asked to participate at Nellis, we would love to come again," said Col. Ng.

Know your TRICARE provider category

TRICARE users have so many options for selecting their health care providers that the terminology can get very confusing. Knowing their providers' TRICARE category can help them make the right choice, and save them money.

TRICARE terms used in reference to providers include: authorized, certified, non-authorized, participating, non-participating, network and non-network.

Providers who treat TRICARE patients must be authorized by TRICARE. This means they can be reimbursed by TRICARE for its share of costs for medical benefits, and they are qualified to provide certain health benefits to TRICARE beneficiaries. Only certified providers - who have passed a credentialing process can be authorized by TRICARE.

Beneficiaries must ask their providers if they are authorized by TRICARE before seeking treatment from them. Providers can contact TRICARE regional managed care support contractors (provider relations department) for an application to become authorized.

Beneficiaries who use non-authorized providers may be responsible for their entire bill, and there are no legal limits on the amounts these providers can bill beneficiaries. Examples of non-authorized providers are most chiropractors and acupuncturists. Other non-authorized physicians include those who do not meet state licensing or training requirements, and those who never sought, or were rejected for, authorization by TRICARE.

Authorized caregivers may be participating or non-participating providers on a case-by-case basis.

Participating providers agree to accept the TRICARE allowable charge as payment in full for the care they provide TRICARE beneficiaries. Patients are responsible for any out-of-pocket costs, including deductibles, that are they can legally charge patients up to 15 percent more than the TRICARE allowable charge. TRICARE beneficiaries generally file their own claims for care obtained from non-participating providers, and TRICARE pays its portion of the allowable charges directly to beneficiaries to pay the bills.

Patients are personally responsible for paying any out-of-pocket costs, including deductibles, specified by their health plans, plus, the 15 percent difference the non-participating providers can charge them.

Network providers are participating providers that have discount agreements with the TRICARE program. They are required to file claims and they receive reimbursement directly from TRICARE. Eligible beneficiaries pay their out-of-pocket costs, including deductibles, specified by their TRICARE health plans. When users of TRICARE Standard receive care from TRICARE network providers, they are using the TRICARE Extra option, which costs less. Under TRICARE Extra, active duty family members' out-of-pocket costs equal 15 percent, and all other TRICARE beneficiaries' out-of-pocket costs equal 20 percent. Under TRICARE Standard, not using network providers, active duty family members' out-of-pocket costs equal 20 percent of the allowable charge, and all other TRICARE beneficiaries' out-of-pocket costs equal 25 percent of the allowable charge. Deductibles are the same for both options.

To determine health care providers' TRICARE category, beneficiaries should ask them or their staff, or call regional managed care support contractors. TRICARE service center representatives, beneficiary counseling and assistance coordinators and health benefits advisers at military treatment facilities also can provide assistance.

Nellis children perform Sleeping Beauty

By Ms. Monique Staskiewicz
AWFC Public Affairs

Excitement and giggles were heard throughout the Base Theater Monday during auditions for the Missoula Children's Theatre production of Sleeping Beauty.

"This is an Air Force-wide program that will touch all bases in the United States and overseas," said Tina Madsen, Nellis Boys and Girls Club. This is a wonderful opportunity for Nellis children to express themselves."

About 30 children ages 5 through 16 auditioned in hopes of getting a part. Two children, one young and one older, will play the role of Sleeping Beauty.

"We are looking for three things that the children can do in the audition. First is that they have a loud clear voice so that everyone in the audience will be able to hear them," said co-production director Mr. Aaron Martin. "Big expressive movement is second and the third is the ability to take direction."

Parents looked on as the large group of children bustled on stage to show their stuff.

"I think it's great that my children have something to do that only takes a week's worth of time," said Ms. Tiffin Perkins, wife of Capt. Sean Perkins. I have three children auditioning, Ethan, Gabrielle and Grace."

After grueling rehearsals for a week, the final participants will perform with two directors who will play the parts of the evil witch and the happy jester.

Everyone is invited to the base theater today for free performances of Sleeping Beauty. The showtimes are 3 and 7 p.m.

High blood pressure: The 'silent killer'

By Ms. Monique Staskiewicz
AWFC Public Affairs

August is National Blood Pressure Month. Health and Wellness Center offers free blood pressure checks for Nellis all year round.

The misperception that high blood pressure happens later in life is very common. High blood pressure disease can happen at any time, said Ms. Laura Weart, HAWC director.

Blood pressure checks are painless and could save your life. Blood pressure tests are given manually or by computer.

According to research done by the Rose Medical Center, as many as 50 million Americans either have high blood pressure or are taking high blood pressure medication.

The readings are measured with two numbers, systolic and diastolic. Normal blood pressure is 120 for systolic blood pressure reading and 80 for diastolic blood pressure reading.

If a patient's blood pressure exceeds normal levels, the center monitors them for five days to determine if medical attention is needed, said Ms. Weart.

Different factors cause high blood pressure.

"High Blood pressure can be caused by stress and genetics, such as your parents or grandparents have had the disease, you could be predisposed to having it," said Ms. Weart. "Obesity, smoking, a high salt diet and an inactive life-style can all contribute to the disease.

Symptoms are uncommon. Being tested is the best way for measuring blood pressure. Some signs can include but are not limited to headaches, dizziness and ill health.

"They call high blood pressure, 'the silent killer,'" said Ms. Weart. "You could be walking around feeling fine and not showing any symptoms."

The HAWC sponsors a blood pressure screening Aug. 23, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the main exchange. For more information, call 653-3376.

Dancing enhances Nellis' youth learning

By Ms. Monique Staskiewicz
AWFC Public Affairs

Passing by the Dock, child development centers or the Youth Center, you might hear someone yelling, "five... six... seven... eight," over music. It's not an audition; it's Ms. Shelby Brown teaching Nellis' youth how to dance.

The classes are one of many outreach programs sponsored by Nellis Boys and Girls Club to enhance learning. Ms. Brown's year round program offers tap, jazz and ballet for children and adults.

"These classes benefit the children," said Ms. Elva Owens, vice president of administration. "It teaches them coordination and teamwork which is what we like to promote at the Youth Center."

"When I was growing up, I already knew what I wanted to do—I was going to be a dancer," said Ms. Brown.

She has performed on television, in movies, Broadway shows and toured around the world. Ms. Brown danced in the movies: Tap with Mr. Gregory Hines, Can You Feel Me Dancing with Ms. Justine Bateman, Teen Wolf II and the video Smooth Criminal with Mr. Michael Jackson.

Ms. Brown was raised in an Air Force family and feels a special kinship with the military.

"My father was in the Air Force. I was a military brat and studied where ever my father went," said Ms. Brown. "He retired at Travis Air Force Base, Calif., so I started studying and teaching dance there. Then, I decided to move to Los Angeles and that's how I got my start in dance."

"Shelby is a wonderful addition to our program," said Ms. Owens. "We've had ballet and tap classes here at the Youth Center since 1986. Shelby now teaches both these classes."

This is Ms. Brown's fourth year at Nellis Boys and Girls Club. When she started she had about 20 people in class. Currently she has 120 students.

"Every time I transferred with my family, I would join the Youth Center program to train for dance, but most programs on base were small and offered only a class here and there," said Ms. Brown. "So I turned professional and wanted to give back to the military by offering students a bigger program with a higher quality of dance so that they could go out there and be professionals too."

Ms. Brown feels that the most important part of her program is the students' personal growth.

"In the world that we live, dance is a good confidence builder," said Ms. Brown. "But the most important thing students learn is that they are the only ones who make the difference. When they come to class I can give them all kinds of information, but they find out by practicing and taking the time to improve outside of class. There is instant pride that comes with self improvement."

"Shelby is a great teacher," said Ms. Michele Wagner. "Heather (her daughter) and I love it! We both are enrolled in the program."

Her students also perform on base for the Fourth of July presentation, Easter and Holiday shows as well as the annual end of year recital.

"This dance program is right at Nellis' fingertips and the price for classes is half the cost for a similar class off base," said Ms. Brown.

Summer session is already in progress. For information on the fall dance program schedule and prices, or other programs like taekwon do, kung fu, soccer and gymnastics call the Nellis Boys and Girls Club at 652-9307.

Team Nellis gears up

By Mr. Larry Bridges
99th Services Squadron

The 2000 Squadron Elite competition runs Sept. 7-15.

This Olympic-styled event is a squadron versus squadron athletic competition that promotes esprit de corps and develops teamwork and fosters camaraderie with organizations.

Squadrons enter co-ed teams in 11 different activities including, volleyball, softball, basketball, bowling, tennis, horseshoes, swimming, the mile relay, 5K run, golf and tug-o-war.

The intent of the program is to include as many individuals as possible, not just the top-notch athletes.

Squadrons that have high participation have traditionally done well in past years. The program is open to active duty military people assigned to Nellis.

Those interested in participating in the Squadron Elite competition, can sign up with squadron sports representatives or call the Sports and Fitness Center at 652-6436. Armed Forces Bank and Buzard Eye Institute sponsor Squadron Elite.

Intramural golf playoffs underway

By Staff Sgt. Benny Colley
99th Services Squadron

Tiger Woods may have won just about everything, but the Nellis Air Force Base Intramural Golf Championship.

Only 10 teams remain in the running for this season's title, after the first round of the playoffs.

Gearing up to continue in rounds two and three are the 896 Munitions Squadron, 99th

Communications Squadron, 15th Reconnaissance Squadron, 11th Reconnaissance Squadron, 414th Combat Training Squadron, 57th Aircraft Generation Squadron #2, 99th Medical Group #2, 99th Security Forces Squadron, 99th Mission Support Squadron and Range Management Office.

The top two teams are scheduled to vie for the base championship Thursday.

Voted off the green, or rather, not qualifying for the next round were 57th Equipment Maintenance Squadron, 422nd Test and Evaluation Squadron, 99th Services Squadron, 66th Rescue Squadron, Detachment 13, 57th Logistics Support Squadron, 99th Supply Squadron, 99th Contracting Squadron, 99th Transportation Squadron, 820th RED HORSE, 99th Comptroller Squadron and 57th Component Squadron.

Golf season concludes this year's intramural program, a program that began back in the last century. The golf program is the final chance to earn points toward the Commander's Cup, emblematic of sports supremacy at Nellis.

Results of the Commander's Cup competition will be announced after intramural golf season. For more information, call the Fitness Center at 652-6433.
